Technical Project Manger
Southface Sarasota

EMIT, Accredited NGBS Green Verifier

Cassidy Statler-Hiatt is originally from the Northeast and moved to Florida in 2016 to finish her degree at USF in Environmental Science & Policy with a concentration in Sustainability. After working many years in restaurants, and beginning her career in the natural environment, she decided her impact could be larger working in the built environment, and began her work in sustainability with Manatee County, and then on to a sustainable building consultant. With experience in green building certifications and building sciences, and energy efficiency, she now is the Technical Project Manager at Southface Sarasota, where she manages the GoodUse Sarasota program. In her free time, you can catch her curling up with a good book on the couch with her animals and husband, at the beach, or at the gym!"
